THE GAZETTE.

MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 8

How they Gamble at Saratoga. For an hour before midnight and an hour after men come and go. The room is wellfilled almost continuously. Everybody is there. It is the proper thing to visit the club house when you go to Saratoga. Men of business and of the professions who at home would never think of intering a gambling-room, go to the Saratago club house. Colonel Tom Ochiltree says he has heard that even ministers of the gospel bave been seen examining the mysteries of the clubhouse Sure it is if you want to find a man about 12 o'clock p. m., and he isn't at his hotel, the palce to look for him, without regard to his calling or habits at home, is the club-house.

Along one side of the ball are arranged the roulette tables Rouge et noir has taken a firm hold on the country of its adoption. In the Wild Wee —at Ei Paec, Leadyllie or Helena—ten men play faro where one risks a dollar en the red or black. In the Stratega cut-bou-e ten men gather about the wheel and watch the little ivory ball go circling round, where one site down in front of the fare lay-sur and the desier. It is all because of so much going to Europe. Traveled Americans have got away from the American game. They want a reminiscence of Monaco when they visit Saratoga, so they stake their dollars on the whirling wheel. The roulette-playing at Saratoga is without system.

In an entire evening the visitor will hard-ly see one of these devotees who believes it is possible to work out like a mathematical problem a sure problem of beating the game. hand-made Brick are the beautionally some college students or young where exposed to the weather. banks clerks come in with a scheme and a little pot of money. They keep a record of every roll of the ball and stake their chips in accordance with their plan. For an hour, perhaps, the scheme works to the entire satisfaction of the group of players. The stock of chips accumulate most encouragingly, but then, by an unaccountable turn, luck goes against the plan. The winnings and the accumulated capital slowly but surely melt away. The discomfitted players withdraw to discuss the weak point in their plan.

The most of the players have no method. They have $5, $10, $20 or $50 worth of the chips and scatter the ivories here and there as the moment prompts. If they lose the first investment they get up and go away. If they double or treble it by a few lucky hits they shove the chips across the table to the banker, cash in and leave. That is the New Yorker's way of playing roulette. These quick and moderate winnings are said to have made a bole in the bank account of the clut-house this sesson.

A New York broker walked up to the centre table last evening, waited for a few turns of the wheel, and threw down a $100 bill on the big red diamond. Red won. The roller began to pass over the stacks of chips. The briker shock his head. Returning the chips to the rack the roller opened the drawer, count dout $100 and handed it to the broker with the original bill. Too player pocketed the money and walked way. He was done. If black had won he would have stopped with that one play just the same. It is from the steady players that the wheel makes the winnings for the
